however, the patient must remain mindful of the decisions they are making and be cautious when faced with choices that could possibly put them back to where they started.

surgical interventions for head and neck tumors result in anatomic or neurologic insults with site-specific patterns of dysphagia